

Overview – Loveland Ski Area has long been known throughout Colorado as the locals' favorite. Offering Denver's closest full mountain experience, Loveland has a reputation of providing skiers and riders with world-class terrain at reasonable prices. Thanks in large part to Loveland Ski Area's location providing excellent conditions and an average of 400 inches of snow each season, Loveland is typically one of the first ski areas in the nation to open, in mid to late October, and one of the last to close in early May. It is the combination of early opening dates, excellent conditions and varied terrain that lure everyone from beginners to loyal locals to Loveland year after year.

Location – Loveland Ski Area is located just 53 miles from Denver, easily accessed just minutes from I-70, making it not only close, but easy to reach. Loveland Ski Area provides skiers and riders with 1,365 acres of diverse terrain, including a naturally separated beginners area located in Loveland Valley, and open, steep and deep bowls high atop the Continental Divide on "The Ridge." During the regular season, the Valley caters to beginners who enjoy a learning area free from intimidating terrain and expert snow riders.

The Mountain – At Loveland Ski Area it's simple, it's all about the skiing and riding. With an average of 400 inches of snow a year, Loveland receives more snow than any other Summit county resort. Loveland is a dream come true for those who just want to keep it simple, free close-in parking and un-crowded slopes, mean no hassles for people who love to simply spend time on the mountain. Loveland Ski Area offers something for everyone with award winning expert terrain off Chairs One and Nine at Loveland Basin, a naturally separated beginners area at Loveland Valley, and of course, plenty of long, open and perfectly groomed intermediate slopes perfect for easy cruising.
